SAM JOHNSTON'S STREAK HITS 40 YEARS
"MY HAPPY HIGHWAYS"
By: Sam Johnston

The 1970s

Where was I when I started all of this healthful foolishness? The '70s saw nothing happening with me on the exercise front for the first five years. Then in 1975, I bought myself a pair of white Adidas sneakers that today would probably cripple a modern day runner, and I started running. I guess youth (33) saved me from getting myself into so much pain that I would take the easy way out and give it all up. I was living in Dallas at the time, and I ran rather sporadically sometimes taking off four or five days in between runs. In 1975, I moved to England and there, somewhat inspired by the strong British tradition of having excellent runners, I kept plugging away at it, but I was still taking huge intervals off between runs. Then, on a date that had no significance, 26 August 1977, I decided that I would try to run 100 days straight. Honestly, I did not expect to do it, but here I am writing this. So, what do you remember over the span of 40 years? Well, certainly that the late '70s were the coup d'envoi, the kickoff, of it all.

The 1980s

The '80s found me beginning the decade living in northern Virginia near Washington DC. I don't recall any particularly memorable running experiences there, but I do remember running on nice, cool autumn days and in a number of deep snows where you had to run in tire ruts for traction. I liked living there, and I had a number of five to seven mile loops that I ran. In 1983, I moved to the island of Terceira in the Azores, and the island had some very scenic places to run. I would sometimes run a loop out along the coast which was a slow descent into the town of Praia da Vitória. I would come back by a road that required me to redo that slow 365 foot descent I ran going out, by running back up a very short, steep hill where your nose almost rubbed the pavement. It was a very enjoyable two years. When I left the Azores, I moved to southern Virginia, the Hampton Roads area. While living there, I belonged to a local running club and that is also where I ran in my first half marathons, the annual Mulberry Island Half Marathon and the annual Colonial Half Marathon which was at that time held in Williamsburg, Virginia. I left the '80s with 13 years of streak running under my belt.

The 1990s

I was still running in southern Virginia until June 1991. In March of 1991, I ran my one and only marathon, the Shamrock Marathon, at Virginia Beach. Then in June, we moved to Korea. The first two and a half years we lived in Taegu, Korea's fifth largest city. Just about a half mile from our apartment was a lake that was approximately a mile around. I would run down there from home in the mornings, and run four to five laps around the lake. There was a group of elderly Korean men who met there every morning to socialize and they would smile and cheer each time I did a lap. We lived our last two years in Seoul, and like all of Korea, at that time, the air quality was terrible. We often joked that if you were running and felt the need for more oxygen, you could just grab a handful of air and chew the oxygen out of it for an added boost. I retired from my job in November 1995, and we left Korea and moved to Naples, Florida. At that time, the whole state of Florida had the same population as Seoul, Korea. However, the air was suddenly sweet again and the running was great. I ran in the last four Naples Half Marathons of the decade, and my wife and I ran in three Seven Mile Bridge Runs in the Florida Keys held on Marathon Key. A very nice decade.

The 2000s

I ran in six more Naples Half Marathons before deciding I did not want to run in it any longer. The 2006 race would be my last one. My daughter, who lives in New Hampshire, decided to fly down and run it with me. My wife and I noticed there was something different about her, a glow maybe. She finally confessed that after six years of marriage she was pregnant, and so both she and our first granddaughter ran the race with me. That made my last organized race a very joyful event. During the 2000s, I achieved another goal. I remember in grade school, after doing the math, I figured that if I could last for 58 years I would see the turn of the century. I obviously made it. I had a lot of nice runs during this decade in Naples, and also in Austria, the Czech Republic, Italy, Germany and various states we travelled. We have visited Salzburg, Austria three times and Salzburg has a very scenic running path along the Salzach River. It has been one of my favorite places to run.

So, this final period found me still running mostly in Naples, but I did add Sicily and Ireland to my list of places. We recently went to Asheville, North Carolina to tour the city and to watch the eclipse. I ran every morning there in the dark hoping I would not trip and fall, since I was so close to achieving my 40 year goal. The good news is I made it through my anniversary date. Most recently I was faced with the prospect how to keep my streak alive with the horrible Hurricane Irma approaching. A friend and a fellow streak runner who is now on the retired list and who told me initially about the USRSA, called and said he would run with me after midnight on the morning of 10 September, the day the storm was to hit. It was a hot and humid midnight here in Naples but we did 1.5 miles within the community. A good thing we did it then because by the end of the day on 10 September there wasn't a passable road in our little community. The next day I got up early and walked out of our neighborhood to a shopping center next door where I knew there would be no trees down blocking the parking lot. I ran there every morning for a couple of days until things started returning to normal. Hurricanes themselves are not too bad, with all of our new building codes but it is the after storm that makes you suddenly think you are in a third world nation. No power so no air conditioning, no grocery stores open, no restaurants open, no gas, no way to charge your phone, and finally the ensuing problems with the powerless lift stations which is how we move our sewage here in southwest Florida. It was my fourth hurricane since I became a streak runner, but I have always been able to find a way to get my run in.

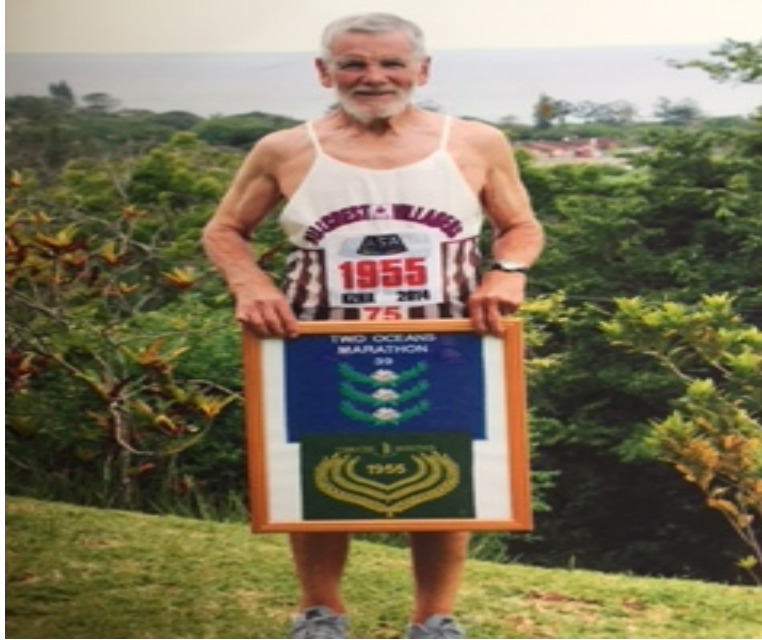

Now, that I have made it to the 40 year mark, I shall just take it one day at a time. However, truth be known, it is not where I run, but that I run. I attribute my feelings of wellness and continual happiness to what running everyday has done for me. About three years ago, I saw a neurologist who, upon finding out how long I had been running, told me that I should not have a working joint in my body. However, at 75 they all seem to be working quite well, and I am still in very good health. And, I do know that I am lucky, but there was a University of Texas football coach, Darrell Royal, who used to say that the harder he worked at something, the luckier he got. He also said that, "You should dance with who brung you." For me that would be running. I give it a lot of credit for my good health. For good measure though, throw in a loving, tolerant, and wonderful wife. In the early '70s I saw the movie, Walkabout, and it ended with the following verse from the poem, The Shropshire Lad, by A.E. Housman.

"Into my heart an air that kills from yon far county blows:
What are those blue remembered hills, what spires, what farms are those?
That is the land of lost content, I see it shining plain,
The happy highways where I went and cannot come again."

I have loved all of my happy highways and fortunately my contentment is not lost. I hope our other members have enjoyed their running experiences as much as I have, and I hope we all still have a lot of happy highways in front of us. Here is hoping all members run well and run often and run for a very long time.

In closing, another line of poetry that I have enjoyed is from T. S. Elliot. "We shall not cease from exploration, and the end of our exploring will be to arrive where we started and know the place for the first time." I wonder if he meant the finish line?

HAPPY RUNNING

FRANK CLARKE'S STREAK HITS 40 YEARS

By: Frank Clarke
Kloof, South Africa

Having recently been honored to receive a wonderful plaque from SRI for the anniversary of my forty years of running without missing a day has made me reflect on how I got to this landmark. Certainly it would not have been possible without the unwavering support of family and friends. It also gives me a boost, when people tell me that I have been instrumental in getting them started and keeping them going when they have setbacks.

I guess one has to be fortunate and perhaps a "little mad" to persevere for so long. It all started when I wanted to lose weight. On the 10th August 1977, I decided to see how long I could go without missing a day, from that day to this, I have managed to keep going despite having Hepatitis and Tic Bite Fever, sticking a garden fork through my foot, having three knee scopes for "clean outs," a pacemaker fitted and then reconnected again after it had dislodged. In the case of hospital admissions, this was achieved by running before going into hospital, ensuring no more than an overnight stay to go for a minimum 4 km run the following afternoon.

Through the years I traveled quite extensively and managed to compete in 3 London to Brighton marathons as well as the London and New York Marathons. I have completed 30 Comrades and 33 Two Oceans in South Africa. I've run in 43 degrees Celsius in the likes of Angola and Namibia, down to a wind chill factor -20 degrees in Chicago. No doubt a rather odd sight in neon shorts and Nike Trainers, never have been one who can tolerate wearing socks or anything on my legs whilst running.

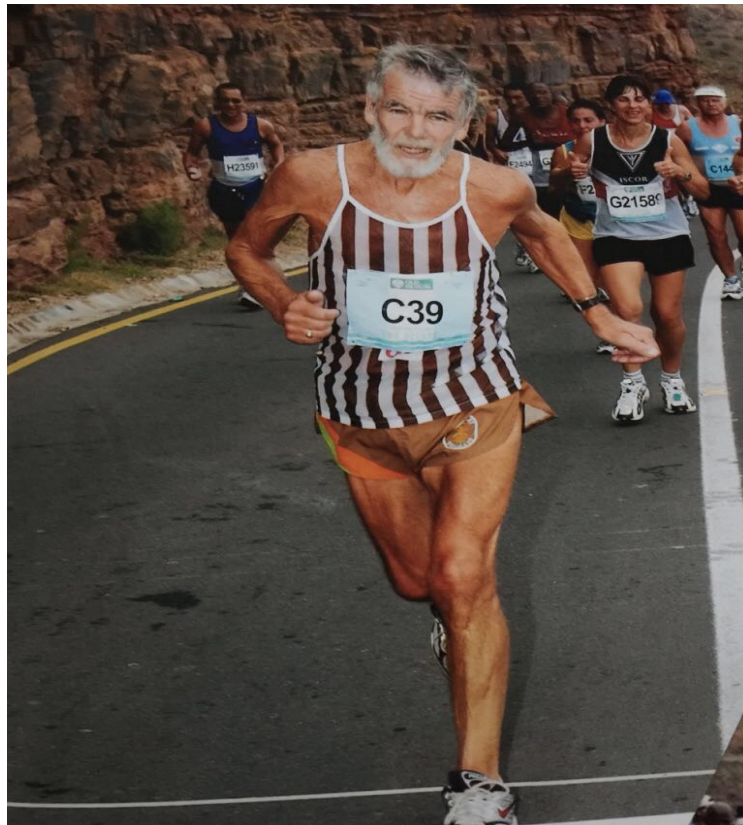

I have even had the privilege of running along part of the Great Wall of China, and had to do an overnight stop in Mauritius on the way back from the Far East to ensure a days running was not “missing” in my diary due to international time/date changes.

I retired in late 1999, and have continued to remain active, spreading my time between South Africa and cruising the canals of the UK. All my running has taken place outdoors and has been on road, where roads have been available or dirt tracks where they have not, with a minimum of 4kms a day.

Having reached 81 and despite the onset of Parkinson’s a few years ago, (running and gym seems to have kept the progression at bay, although at a somewhat slower pace) I will continue as long as my body will allow, long may it last.

Distance run to 10 August 2017 in a nutshell:

YEAR	# DAYS IN YEAR	TOTAL KM's	AVE P DAY
Consecutive	14,389	165547	11.51
Non Consecutive (prior to consecutive)	563	6848
Total	14,952	172395

Steve Bayliss

STEVE BAYLISS' STREAK HITS A DECADE

By: Steve Bayliss

I was nine and a half years into my Running Streak when it nearly went upside down. There were a few other frights and close calls along the way, like I'm sure we've all experienced, but this was the big one for me. It was the day of the surgery. I arrived at the hospital at 11am on a Friday, so I'd had plenty of time for a run in the morning. But this was a general anesthesia level surgery with an overnight stay ahead of me. It was the day after the surgery I was worried about. About two weeks earlier I'd sent a note to the medical team about my Running Streak but hadn't heard back from them.

Now at this point I should explain something, but it's not without an awkward squirm and a sense I'm revealing too much – but hey, we're fellow Streakers right. The surgery was to be on a rather personal part of my anatomy. I would love to boast it was going to be a substantial piece of surgery. The mirror however silently, politely, and objectively informed me that the job would be smaller than I would like to believe.

Anyway, back to the day of the operation. I was, understandably with this audience, more concerned about my ability to run the day after the surgery than other matters. Considering the surgical location, which I think we've all guessed, this is ridiculous. It's the junk dude. Get some damn perspective here. Nope. The run. Tell me about the run. Will I be able to run tomorrow?

Well the first person into the pre-operation briefing was the Anesthetist. His comment - "I saw the file note on the running thing. Sorry, but you have no idea the pain you're going to be in tomorrow. You just need to forget about it now."

Ouch. Not good. But I reckon my pain threshold is pretty high. And clearly he didn't understand the Streakers mindset and determination.

Next visitor. The surgeon. "I saw the file note on the running thing. I reckon you've got a fair chance. It's going to hurt like a bastard. And it depends on how big a job I have to do (I swear I saw him smirk a little at this point). But if you've still got a Catheter in tomorrow afternoon we'll just switch the tap off, roll the pipe into your undies, and you should be able to crack one out (haha, very funny, another smirk)." I liked this guy a lot.

Anyway, regrettably for my ego, but fortunately for my running streak, the mirror was correct. It turned out to be a small bit of surgery. And the run was, while not especially comfortable, largely uneventful.

But I should go back to the start with the frank admission that relative to most folks on the list, I'm not much of a runner. Despite playing competitive rugby until my early twenties, I really didn't start running until I was 30 years old and living in Atlanta. Running properly for the first time in my life, training for the Atlanta half marathon, and loving it six days a week. Then I hit 35 and I was running five days a week. Hit 40 and was running four days a week. Work, life, busy, stress, kids, stuff. It was all getting in the way. Regardless of the excuse, the trend was undeniable and it didn't take a statistician to work out where it was heading. Then I stumbled across Streak Running online. I tried it for a month. Then decided on a year. With a niggling view that ten years would be pretty good. Then the habit really formed. The very few people I shared my goal with would sound a little awed, and maybe I was at the start as well. But I very quickly found that running every day required no motivation at all. I was simply, like brushing my teeth, something I did. I no longer had internal arguments - will I lace up today or not? I just would. It would take a greater force of will and motivation not to run. It simply became a scheduling exercise. When, not if.

I should add. I'm also an old school stickler. From day one of my Streak I set a personal minimum distance of 3km. Not a mile. Largely so I'd never, pre GPS-watch, be close to under shooting the distance. I hold to the continuous, unassisted rule. Stopping at the lights for a cross walk cancels the distance. It has to be unambiguously continuous. And I even have to start and stop at the same altitude. No downhill assists. And I'm time zone silly. Because I travel internationally a lot, my Streak had to be live in both the New Zealand, and the overseas, time zones. So sometimes I'd have two runs on the same day to make the math's work. Go figure that. It also meant I couldn't travel from New Zealand to the UK, or even East Coast USA, in the same day. I'd have to leave a day ahead of other people to stop over for a day, just to have a run. A little OCD there.

Have there been close calls other than the surgery? For sure. I've run at 4am often based on flight schedules between New Zealand and Australia. I've run in golf shoes because bags haven't arrived. In minus 15 degrees Celsius with rubber exoskeletons and cleats over running shoes, in the snow, on the cross-country ski trails, at 6am before skiing in Canada (Hint here for the newer Streakers – never try running after a day's skiing. It's a mistake you'll make once). I've run at 11.30pm at night in a panic after late arriving flights. Through flu's, bugs, colds, migraines, hangovers, sore knees, Achilles strains,... Sometime, not often, it sucks. But the truth is, to steal a quote, "I've never felt worse after a run, than I did before it." So on the whole it's been an amazing journey so far. My daily run, which is usually in the evening, cleanses my mind. Resolves the day. Works through the last of the problems. And relaxes my body. So I won't stop until I have to. Hoping for another note after 20 years Streaking.

Traversing the Tundra Relatively

By: Steve DeBoer

Though not all streak runners are related, unless you go track all their ancestors back several millennia, there are a significant number of them that come from the same family trees. It didn't start that way.

From what we have been able to piece together (see articles I wrote in Issues #2 & 3 Volume 10 of the Streak Registry – Summer and Fall 2010), by the end of 1970, 14 persons had begun running daily, none being related, though Mark Covert and Jon Sutherland knew each other well, being college teammates. Those individuals were:

Ted Corbitt (begun 1953)
Ron Hill (begun 1964)
Amby Burfoot (begun 1966)
Bob Ray (begun 1967)
Mark Covert (begun 1968)
Jon Sutherland, Bruce McLanahan, Bob Hensley (1969)
Bruce Mortenson, Jim Pearson, William Benton, Ken Young, Steve DeBoer, Herb Fred (1970)

The first related daily runners were from MN, as Dave DeBoer (Steve's brother) started in July 1972, and ran daily for 6 years. It wasn't until 1978 that 3 more relatives joined the group: Don Pearson in January (Jim's brother), Wendell DeBoer in February (making 3 in that family), & John Roemer IV in November (son of John III, who started streaking in December 1977). By January 1980, there were at least 112 individuals who had run daily for at least one year, and 7 of them were related (6% of the total).

As of September 15, 2017, at least 189 internationally and 1306 within the US had run at least 365 consecutive days, and that does not include many who now celebrate their streaks on the Streak Association Facebook page but do not chose to certify them. Of those 1495, 144 of them are related. Breaking this down, only 4 of the International runners relate – Stuart & Martin Ainsworth in England; Mairead & Tim Blennerhassett in Ireland or 2.1%. There is much more relativity to streak running in the US, with 140 being related, or 11%.

Among the 50 states plus Washington DC, 17 of the 51 (33%) have no related runners, with OH (39) and TN (21) having the most non-related streakers in one state. The Unrelated States are:

AL, DC, DE, HI, IA, KS, ME, MS, MT, ND, NE, OH, OK, TN, VT, WV, WY.

There are 5 other states that have one related runner, but their relations are/were in other states: AR (Len Burton – son Burton in FL), CT (Fred Murolo - sister Mercedes in CA), GA (Joel Pearson lived there awhile but his dad, uncle, and siblings live in WA), NY (Fred Winkel – brother Marty in FL), & SD (Steve DeBoer lived there a few years but other family members in MN). With 70 known streak runners in NY, it is amazing that none are related to someone else in their state. MO is unique in that it has two related but not to each other (Len Burton before he moved to AR & Dave DeBoer after he moved from MN). Then there is AK – I believe Rhonda Wegner & Todd Taylor were not married at the time of their running streaks. So if we want to limit this to legal relations and residing in the same state, only 27 of the 51 can claim two or more running daily.

Here are the states (12) with two related streak runners - ID (Brian & Toni Orth), IL (Les & Petie Russo, though Jordan Trump's wife may have had a running streak, which would give them 4), KY (Michael & Michelle Beck), LA (Brian & Jill Jones), MA (Nancy & Tim West), NH (Patricia & Robert Montana), NM (Elizabeth & John Saucedo), NV (Randy & R. Christopher Read), RI (John & Jacob Mosby), SC (Tod & Kathryn O'Donnell), UT (Diane & Jeff Shumway), and VA (Christy & Chip LeDuff). In MI (John Jr & Karen Wallace), and OR (Ericka & Benjamin Kimball) we can count 3 daily runners since John Wallace III has run part of his streak in each of those states.

Leaves 13 states unaccounted for:	NJ	4	Mark & Diane Washburne; Guy & Laurie Gordon (not registered)
	NC	5	Patrick & Erika Greene; Valerie & Michael Perez (moved from FL); Steve DeBoer (also MN, SD)
	CO	5	Roger (also MN, TX, WI), Jane & Grant (also AZ) Nelson; J Wade & Jackson Baker
	WI	6	Harold & Renate Tomesch; Ellen & Mary Runnoe; Joel Pearson (also WA, SC); Roger Nelson (part of year; also CO, MN, TX)
	PA	6	Don & Tammy Slusser; Brad & Janet Blaszyński; Jason & Aleah Young
	AZ	7	Travis & Jillian Farland; John & Teresa Woody; Laustin & Sarah Woods; Grant Nelson (also CO)
	IN	7	Eliza Eshelman & Kyle Miron + Peter, Peter Jr. & Timothy Eshelman; Matthew & Tammy Root
	MD	7	Mary, John III & John IV Roemer; Susan, Zoe & Caitlin Schultz; Gary Rust (also CA)
	TX	7	Roger Nelson (also MN, CO, WI); Bill Nelson & Healthier Nelson Plummer; Luis & Victoria Gomez; Ann & Eugene Chen
	FL	10	Lois & Ron Bastien; Marty Winkel; Ed & Jonathan Reid; Bill & Ruth Gorman; Michael & Valerie Perez (to NC)
	WA	11	Jim, Joel (also SC, WI), Hopper, Don & Paige Pearson; Jay & Stephanie Kammerzell; Jonathan & Michele Arnold; Tim & Amie Williams; John Wallace III (also MI, OR)
	CA	11	Gary, Veronica & Yeraj Rust; Mercedes Murolo; Jennifer, Conrad & Nolan Walt; Robert & Cindi Harris; Brett & Tracy Johnson
	MN	32	Steve (also SD, NC), Dave (also MO), Wendell DeBoer & Kevin Duban; Paul, Sherry & Klare Case; Al, Pete & Liz Gilman; Mike, Beth, Oliver, Natalie, Jenna, Lauren Thorson & Scott Tonneson; Jennifer Fitzharris-Funk & Brian Funk; Michael & Annalisa Buerke; Todd & Catherine Vitols; Briar Andresen & Steven Beck; Mandy Colten & Matthew Montain; Jennifer & Tim Mathiesen; John Magnuson & Mary Sarafolean; Roger Nelson (also CO, TX, WI)

Looking at which states have the highest percentage related daily runners, some have less than 8 total, so it doesn't take many to have a high percentage (RI – 50%; LA & AK – 40%; SD – 33%; UT & KY – 25%). But there are other states with over 30 on the streak list who have significant percentages in the same family trees (WA – 33%; MN – 26%; AZ & IN – 23%). As for most streaking in the same family, the Thorsons and brother-in-law Scott Tonneson (MN) have the most – 7; then come the Eshelmans (IN) and Pearsons (WA) with 5. The DeBoers (MN) have 4 and are the only family that can claim 3 generations – grandfather Wendell, sons Steve & Dave, grandson Kevin Duban.

Though the Thorsons have the most related daily runners with the same last name (6), there are other last names found more frequently among the 1306 Americans. If we combine Myers, Meyer, Meyers, there are 6 stateside and none elsewhere. There are 6 Browns in the US, 7 if we add international streakers. There are 7 with the surname Miller. Adding Michael Jones of England makes 8 with that surname (Jill & Brian (LA), Will (OK), Gary (MT,WA), Katherine (NV/NJ), Richard (IA), Staci (MD), and Tammy (FL) are the others). There are 8 Smiths, counting international – Gary (WV), Maureen & Evelyn (IL), Mary Beth (NY), Stacy (MN), Laura (MA), Jeffrey ((CO), & Paul (England). If we combine Johnson and Johnston, there are 8 of them (Michael (OR), Mike (AL), Jack (IN), Deborah (CO), Samuel (FL,VA), Ken (TX), Brett & Tracy (CA), and Matthew Johnson of Spain).

Eight (all in the US) have the surname Read/Reed/Reid – Stephen (ME), R. Christopher & Randy (NV), Gretchen (KS), Katie (NY), Jonathan & Ed (FL), and Patrick (CA). There are also 8 Wrights – John (NY), Julie (MA), Corinne (MN), Felton (FL), Rich (PA), James (OH), Kaitlyn (IN), and Carroll (OK), none outside the US. But the largest contingent by far are the Nelsons/Nelsens – Roger, Jane & Grant (CO, MN, TX, AZ, CO, WI), Diana (IL), William, Heather & Brett (TX), Kelly & Scott (MN), Robert (FL), Christina (NY), Lance (VA), Kyle (MI), Kyle Anne (CO), for a total of 14. However, adding Steven Nielsen of Denmark makes 15!

In the Spring 2015 issue of the Streak Registry, I listed how many total years of running daily had been accomplished by pairs of related runners, based on relationship. I will update them here, listing the top 3 to 5 in each category. Note that among daily runners, there are 42 spouse pairs who share this passion, by far the most common relationship to do it!

Postscript: Received the following from Ron Hill: Hi Steve, I had stent fitted into one of my arteries on February 2nd and since then I have had various problems with my feet which are now resolved. I walk one mile every day and began to run some of that but yesterday I ran all the way on a very hilly course and ended up with pains in my chest/heart and have decided to stick to walking. It may be that I will never run again, but I feel that this is better than dying! Best Regards, Ron. As you know, Ron has the longest running streak recorded in the world, at 52 years and 1 month. However, he ran only ½ mile on May 28, 1967, so his longest mile-minimum streak was 49 years 8 month. As of 12/1/2017, the next 4 longest (1 mile minimum, all currently active) are Jon Sutherland (48 years 6 months), Jim Pearson (47 years 9 months), Steve DeBoer (46 years 6 months), and Alex Galbraith (45 years 11 months).

REJHAN BOSNJAK JOINS SRI FROM DENMARK

My affection for running began in 2012, after several knee injuries over the years forced me to stop playing football (soccer). I joined the local running club and met many fantastic people who introduced me to the world of running. Completing my first Marathon in the spring 2013 was without a doubt the biggest accomplishment in my running career, an accomplishment that matured me as much as a person as a runner. My running activity has been fluctuating in the past few years, partly because of the lack of long-term goals. I hope this will change now.

Running gives you a feeling like no other thing in the world. For me personally, running functions as de-stressing both physically and mentally. The feeling of freedom and joy one gets when becoming aware of the path beneath the feet and the wind in the hair is indescribable.

Inspired by the Philosophy of the USRSA and particularly Ron Hill's story, I now perceive the act of running as much more than just as a means to keep in shape. As Hill and other legends within the Streak Runners community has shown, values like dedication and persistence should be the essential guidelines, not only with regard to running but also within every aspect of life.

My journey as a streak runner have just begun, and I look forward to the many running adventures as well as challenges that the future undoubtedly will bring.

CHARLOTTE LAWSON JOINS USRSA

I began running in 1982 to get out of team activities which were associated with bench warming. Running got me off the bench. I kept running sporadically for stress relief through college. Then to keep myself challenged and to model planning and perseverance skills for my children I trained and ran every distance up to a marathon, including a sprint tri. It is magical to have so many diverse souls come together who have all be working to reach the same finish line. Looking for another goal after my last race, I discovered streak running and started to explore the world. Every day is just a little bit sweeter because I run. To run every day for the rest of my life would be heaven on earth.

JOHN WATTS' STREAK ENDS AFTER 13,474 DAYS

Sorry to have to inform you that my running streak has ended. I was putting my shoes on for my morning run when something slipped in my lower back. This has happened before, but never this bad. With two canes I could barely walk. Running was out of the question. My streak started October 4, 1980. The last day I ran was August 24, 2017. Almost 37 years. Long enough, I guess!

John Watts
Nampa, Idaho

JIM MEULENDYKE'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 632 DAYS

I ended my streak on July 19, 2017 after 632 consecutive days of running. This was an intentional ending after competing in a 1/2 Ironman the weekend before. I was simply tired of running and wanted to do something different for a workout.

Thank you for allowing me to be part of the Association, I will forever take pride in my streak!

Jim Meulendyke
Brookfield, Wisconsin

JOHN WOLFF'S STREAK HITS 27 YEARS

My streak is still going well- a self imposed minimum of 3 miles per day. Hopefully it will continue for many more years.

LEAH BROWN'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 535 DAYS

It is with disappointment to report that I discontinued my 535-day running streak on June 30, 2017, due to a Tibial stress fracture that would not heal even with just streak saving miles.

While I was disappointed to end my streak, I look forward to starting a new streak once recovered and stronger.

Leah Brown
Spencerport, New York

DAVE MAX'S STREAK HITS 14 YEARS

Yes, my streak is still alive and well. I'm running on average 40 miles a week, with 3 miles being typically my minimum distance. However, there have been a handful of days over the last five years when I've needed to do the absolute minimum of one mile due to travel and/or sickness.

Additionally, I noticed that I'm still listed as living in Alexandria, VA, but I moved to Wichita Falls, TX about a year ago.

Dave Max
Wichita Falls, Texas

ELLEN WESTFELT'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

My running streak is still going strong, I'm at it every day! So I'm looking forward to another year of running!

Paul Wichmann and Raven Kraft

PAUL WICHMANN RUNS WITH THE RAVEN

Wanted to send you a streak update. It will be 10 1/2 years for me in a couple days. Today was particularly special. I had the good fortune to find myself in Miami and I was able to enjoy day 3836 with Raven who was on day 15587. I ran all 8 miles and am now officially 'Wicked Sound.' I am the 2764th runner to run with the legend.

JOSEPH WALF JOINS USRSA

My running journey began like a lot of people, struggling to run a mile in Middle and High school. I always enjoyed other sports especially basketball, but I could not get over the pain of side stitches while running.

Fast forward to my late twenties and I made a decision to get healthy and lose weight before my 30th birthday. I joined a company sponsored team based weight loss competition and lost 52 pounds in 2012. The other members that were part of the team also did a great job and we came in first place!

The success of that challenge sparked an interest in completing the Chase Corporate Challenge 3.5 mile race. I downloaded a couch-to-5k application and started my running journey. I dealt with blisters above both heels (caused by poorly fitting shoes and short socks), runner's knee, and side stitches before completing my first Corporate Challenge on 06/06/13.

For the next couple of years my running consisted of training in the spring to compete in Corporate Challenges and 5K races than stopping before the cool fall and cold winter weather. I was looking for a reason to run more consistently and considered training for a marathon, but thought the time commitment would be too detrimental to my cherished time with my wife (purchaser of the short socks) and daughter.

I came across the running streak challenge and thought it was just what I was looking for. I started my streak on 06/05/16. In the past year I have run at least a mile everyday in 13 different locations in all types of weather including a low of 9 degrees and a high of 90 degrees. I completed my first year of streak running on 06/04/17. My new goal is the same as before, to run every day.

Kyle Anne Nelson

KYLE ANNE NELSON ENDS STREAK AFTER 1,125 DAYS

My 1,125 run streak ended Wednesday 8/30/17, the day after I was diagnosed with cancer and endured 3 sets of biopsies and one other medical procedure. The next day, I started a new streak of fighting this fight. On Day 5 of this fight, I just ran over 2 miles at a fast pace (for me) and am feeling awesome, grateful, terrified, resolute. I will run as many days as I can and will come back to streak another day soon. I never took a single run for granted, and have gained so much strength and joy from THIS group. Over the course of the 1,125 days, you all have helped me find grit and determination as well as a deeper appreciation for all life has to offer- rain or shine. This photo was taken 8/1/17 on my 3-year streakiversary. Streak on!

JOHN WINOWIECKI'S STREAK HITS 5 YEARS

Hard to believe it's already been 5 years. So grateful still to be a part of this community. This last year feels like it hasn't been very eventful. I have not participated in any races or other running events, though sometimes my daily routine does feel like a race. While I feel like I've plateaued a bit with my average speed being about the same since 2015, I am working through a goal this year of getting at least one run a month in at a rate that forces me to push myself.

The rewards of running each day continue to be one of my favorite blessings as a result of joining this community. In case its not obvious, the lesson of persistence grows louder with each new day and run. And I can admit, running each day can still be a challenge. But there is an admitted weight now, maybe better to call it momentum, that helps keep me going on those days that feel like a grind. And it seems to be growing with each year I make it through. It's incredible how easy it is to see reflected the importance of persistence in all areas of my life. In work, in relationships, and in achieving any goal I might set for myself, persistence is such a critical element. It feels like a muscle that I'm exercising every day thanks to this community and the accountability, even if it's not so evident, that comes along with it.

Thanks so much to everyone that keeps getting out there and absolutely to those on the boards who keep everyone engaged and updated. Keep showing up. Keep moving. Be encouraged. What a wonderful blessing this is indeed!

SEANA DENNING JOINS USRSA

I am a busy mom of a son and daughter who happened to marry her best friend from high school. Five years ago my journey of becoming a runner began when I was playing with my children outside and was winded by merely chasing them around. It was that day that I decided to make a change for not only myself but for my kids too. I started running that day. At first I could not run the distance of my driveway but I pushed myself with small accomplishments of running one house further with each run I did.

I have run many 5k's throughout this past 5 years. With encouragement from my father, an avid runner himself, I decided to start to train to run a half marathon. In July 2017 one month into my half training with my dad, my life was flipped upside down when he was diagnosed with cancer and died a week later. Some of his last words were to me were to continue my training and to run the race for him. Less than 2 months later I did just as he asked with him pushing me through!

After recovering from a life threatening autoimmune disease I made a conscious effort to focus more on my health and wellness than I ever had before. With the encouragement of my best friend Seana Denning I ran my first 5K race in August of 2015 at "The Color Run" in our home town Rochester. Then I was hooked! After several months of treadmill running in the cold winter, I ran several 5K races throughout the next year: June of 2016 the Mondo Moto 5K, October of 2016 The George Eastman Photo Finish 5K, among other races that were held in our area. I would not consider myself a fast runner, but I always finish!

In April of 2017 I ran a very COLD race at the Heroes on Both Sides, Autism 5K, and decided to move up to the 10K races. My first 10K was in June of this year at The Fast and the Furriest 10K and I loved it. In July I represented the Human Services agency I work for in the Rochester Corporate Challenge 5K. My second 10K was in August for the VOC (Veteran's Outreach Center) Pound the Ground 10K in Mendon Ponds Park. I completed my last race that same month at the Women Run the ROC 5K. For the future I plan on conquering a 15K race that is coming up in October, and will be continuing to join various running groups to get ideas and tips on how to run at my optimal performance. This streak is going to give me a chance to take it to the next level!

I am starting this running streak for many reasons but the best reason is to work alongside my friend Seana Denning and achieve a goal together. We have known each other over 25 years, and have been through many of life's struggles together. Also, like many people my everyday life becomes filled with obligations and commitments, and running gives me a chance to do something for myself. Like many women I have struggled to keep my own identity after becoming a wife and mother. Running has given me a chance to find a piece of myself that may have otherwise been lost. I have also found a new group of running friends that encourage and push each other to do our best.

KEVIN RAPP'S STREAK HITS 9 YEARS

At the outset of my streak, I created a blog, runningfor28years.com. I do not keep up with it so much these days. But occasionally I make an entry. Below is my entry from my anniversary run. Not particularly exciting... but, I guess it's something!

Day 3278. That's 9 years, folks. 19 to go. The year 2036 seems infinitely closer and more attainable than it did 9 years ago, not that I have ever had any major doubts throughout the streak. Though I have more doubts today, than I did on Day 1.

I'm getting older. My body doesn't recover the same way it did in 2008. I have long stretches where I just get in the minimum 1.5 miles. And then, something will change and I'll be back to 5-10 miles a day averages. It's astonishing, the difference in my overall well being when I am on a good stretch of long runs vs short ones. It's like night and day.

The streak has become very routine. Whereas once it was a focal point of my life, now it's just a small blip on the radar screen. I didn't even recall at the outset of today's run that it was my streak anniversary. But once I did, it brought a smile to my face. Milestones are great for perspective.

DEB BRASSFIELD'S STREAK HITS 20 YEARS

My 20 year Run Streak Anniversary is Sept. 10, 2017.

On Sept. 3rd, 1997, I ran 5 miles in the morning, showered and headed for Los Gatos Community Hospital and had my baby girl, Brianna, c-section at 2:17 pm. That 4 plus year Streak ended Sept 4th. My new streak began Sept. 10, 1997, 6 days later. My goal was to run 20 marathons and why not add 20 years of running every day.

I completed and finished 20 marathons, including 5 Boston marathons. My Mom and Brianna are my cheerleaders and were there for 19 of them. They have also been my biggest cheerleaders throughout my run Streak.

I am a flight attendant for United Airlines, 33 years now. I am lucky to have had the opportunity to run all over the world. I am proud to say, I have never had to run in an airport to save my Streak. In my book, if you are not dressed for the run, it doesn't count. Ha.

Thank you to every single member of this special group of runners. You are so inspiring!!!

Big hugs to Brianna and my Mom for never giving up on me!!!!

KARYN GALLIVAN'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 1776 DAYS

My streak has ended. I chose to end my streak after running 1776 days in a row. My last day of Streak running was on July 26th, 2017.

One day, I realized that if I let it, The Streak could become a "thing" that controlled my life, my travel, and those around me. I loved my running streak and never felt that it was a burden in any way. But, I know myself and my (almost) hidden obsessive-compulsive tendencies, and I didn't want this to happen. So, I looked at my streak and thought that 1776 sounded good. On that day, I ran for 1776 seconds and then celebrated this accomplishment while appreciating that I still had the freedom to choose. So, in the spirit of Freedom & Liberty, I did not run the next day. Since then, I am back to my 5 days/week of running. I loved the streak and always look forward to hearing how other Streakers are doing. From the Beautiful state of Rhode Island - Cheers,

MARK SANDS JOINS USRSA

My name is Mark Sands and I've been training and running road races since late 2001. I live and run in beautiful upstate NY. I am a proud father to my 12 year old son Ryan. I have been known to rant and rave on my running blog and YouTube channel and for my day job. I have been as a sheriff's deputy for the Monroe County Sheriff's office for the past 17 years.

Back in October of 2001 I ran my first 5K road race and since then have been totally hooked on everything related to running. Since those first few steps across the start line, I've run 86 different races including 12 half-marathons, 13 marathons and my first 50K last October logging over 32,000 lifetime miles. This Fall I'll be running my 14th marathon and just because I'm super crazy, my second 50K.

I love meeting other runners either in person or through social media. Several years ago I met another stalker, Judy Mick, through Facebook. From the moment we started chatting I knew her and I had a lot in common, except the streaking thing.

I never considered streaking and frankly, thought of that group as the oddballs of the running community. I mean, who runs every day? But the more she and I talked, the more I became fascinated with streaking. I'd already challenged myself with the marathon distance and relished the idea of a new obstacle, one that doesn't have a defined finish line.

On New Year's Eve in 2012 I started something I called the 366 Project. I originally wanted to run for a year and a day, hence the name. But through that time I came to fall in love with streaking and continued for a total of 609 days.

Just when everything was running smoothly, I suffered a devastating back injury and was told that my career and running were over. I don't like being told that I can't do something. So, four months later I started my second streak, worked hard with PT and began being coached by you guessed it, Judy Mick.

Thankfully doctors don't know everything because this October I'll be ringing in my 1000 day of streaking. It's no longer a crazy idea. Steaking has given me so much through the years, appreciation for all four of our seasons, new friends in an incredible community, an amazing coach, and respect for being able to still run and live my life to the fullest. Life is such a gift. One that should be enjoyed one mile and day at a time.

DAREE SELBY ENDS STREAK AFTER 1,296 days

My streak ended abruptly on August 28th, 2017. I had just been thinking as of late "See you can do a running streak and train for an Ironman... or not! I had picked up my bike from the bike shop, washed it and was gathering my things to go into the house when I stumbled and landed on the side of my foot. I immediately knew I had a problem. I iced it and elevated it immediately. A few hours later I attempted to run a slow mile. I made it about a block. I cried all of the way back home.

My family didn't know what to say to me. I have run through many things but this wasn't going to happen. I had to keep the big picture in mind... Ironman Wisconsin... less than 2 weeks away!

By the time Madison rolled around, my foot was about 90%. Unfortunately, I DNF'd Madison due to a crash and a mechanical issue from the crash. Ironically, I didn't even get to run that day.

I am ready for Twin Cities Marathon and plan to start another streak that day. Running the day after a marathon is never pretty but I have done it before! Streak on!

RAYMOND ANAIR JOINS USRSA

I read about streak running several years ago, and finally decided to join on my third year anniversary of streak running. All of my runs I have documented on Garmin with a GPS or other Garmin device if I was treadmill running.

I started running back in 1994 to get ready for the Police Academy. In the early days, I did not log my miles, so I don't have an accurate number of miles run. Since then, I have continued to run to stay in shape and to help relieve the stress caused by my work.

In 2008, I started running marathons, and to date have completed 19 marathons, 9 of them being The Boston Marathon (sorry I don't qualify, I volunteer with my local running clubs to get the time waived entries).

Running a mile each day, as you know can be tough when trying to fit life in. I have had several late night runs to get the run in right after I get out of work at 11 PM or running at midnight to get the run in for the next day. I am also a cyclist, and some of my fellow cyclist think I'm crazy to be running a mile after doing a 80 mile bike ride which I did last week.

The picture I attached was from the 2016 Boston Marathon. I started running all of my marathon's and other high profile runs (Mt. Washington) wearing a Spiderman shirt and if cool enough leggings just to add a little more fun to the event.

Thank you for such a great idea,

MYONG HWAN EISELSTEIN'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 1,097 DAYS

On Sept. 22, 2017, I celebrated three years of running at least one mile a day, every day. I am extremely proud of this accomplishment and it is something that I will always cherish. Unfortunately, I have been battling sore knees, PF and a sore back. So, I have only been able to run the minimum for months now. Therefore, I made the very difficult decision to end my streak and the last date that I ran was Sept. 22, 2017. I would like to thank all of you for three amazing years of friendship and motivation. Please know that I am your biggest fan and I pray that all of you can continue your streaks!

SCOTT ISGETT'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 757 DAYS

My last day of running was May 16, 2017. I had a good two years of running every day. There were a couple of reasons why I let my streak go.

The first reason was due to my extensive travel schedule. I fly a mostly international schedule, and the planning, fatigue, and logistics of running everyday became a burden. The compulsion to run everyday and remain within the rules began to suck the joy out of running.

The second reason was due to a stress fracture 9 months prior. Believe it or not, I continued the streak (at a slow pace) during my recovery. I also came to the conclusion that my body needs rest, and that my running times are better when I take at least one day off every 10 days.

It was a great experiment, but I perform much better with an occasional rest day.

[Editor's note: Highlighting that his streak ended after 757 days, TSR asked United Airlines pilot Scott Isgett if he ever flew a Boeing 757 Jet and received the following reply: "Yes I have! When my streak started I was flying the 757. Coincidence? :)"

CHRIS DODRILL'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 783 DAYS

My running streak has ended. Last day was 9/21. After passing two years of my streak, I just decided it was time to stop. No injury or other obstacle, just a

I'm very honored to join this elite group. I started running again since High School back in 2013. I remember that the main reason why I quit running in High School was because I was too competitive with myself. However I also remember the fun times I had as well.

With my wife pregnant and myself weighing in at 330 pounds. I was looking for that something that was not only going to keep me fit but also be able to keep up with my daughter. With strength training and running I was able to get down to a respectable 220 pounds and find a new purpose in life. Not only was I able to quit the cigarette smoking and stop drinking alcohol but most of all I am able to do the one thing that I was setting out to do: Keep up with my daughter.

In 2014 I found a Facebook group called #RWRunStreak. This is a group that allows people to motivate each other and get in a mile or more everyday between holidays (Thanksgiving to New Year's Day) and (Memorial Day to 4th of July). Because of this group I was able to start a run streak through their motivating stories. The first one was for 53 days but I felt so accomplished that I started another one and another after that one.

So now on my 4th and longest streak of my running career I have been able to set personal records for 5K (23:49) 10K (49:53) Half Marathon (2:00:22). Also since starting my current running streak (10/22/2015) I have also set personal records in a Sprint Triathlon (1:07:34) and completed my first Olympic Distance Triathlon (3:19:00).

Running has given me back the health and happiness I was looking for. I can absolutely say I'm in the best shape of my life at 39 years old and have no plans on ending my run streak anytime soon.

Thank you again for letting me be apart of this awesome group. If there's one piece of advice that I can give to someone that is looking to start a run streak or is going through a rough patch, I would tell you to stop thinking of running the one mile a day as a chore and treat it as your therapist. Have a great one everyone!!!

REZA SAPUTRA'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

Finally, I have run everyday for 2 years, my minimum distance is 10k daily, but I ended up averaging 13k daily with total streak distance of 9558km. I started the streak without any specific reason, I still don't know why I'm doing this, but since I've gone this far, I'll continue. I probably just like running.

I don't know how long I can keep the streak alive, to be honest, 10k/day is very challenging. I've run 4 marathons and an 6-hour ultra, the day after the race is always the hardest and the most painful, Although I always run slow on recovery days, but it still hurts alot. This summer, my racing schedule is quite busy (I've done three races so far), next weekend I'm running a HM and followed by a full Marathon on October 22nd.

I'm super grateful that I haven't had any problem, considering I've dodged so many opportunities to get badly injured. Maybe it's because I somehow always take a step back when something isn't quite right. I can say running is the best thing I've done recently, I was so much depressed with PhD and running keeps me sane. Life is still a bit difficult (There are lows and highs) but knowing that I'm able to run every morning keeps me to look forward for the future. To all runners, whenever you are, keep grinding!

Since I started my sophomore season in cross-country in 1989 I have been running every day. My first streak ended at 861 days with a misdiagnosed case of Bo Jackson's disease (degenerative hip socket).

After getting the OK from my college team doctor, I started my 2nd streak, which ended at 1871 days due to a sliver of bone coming off my foot after stepping in a pothole.

After taking a month off to heal my foot, on October 6th, 1997, I started my current streak-- which stands at 7272 days at the time I write this. Barring catastrophe, accident or injury, I completed my 20th year of the streak on October 6th, 2017 (7306 consecutive days).

To count, I have to run at least 1 mile (without aids) within each calendar day. Since 2000, I have averaged 9 miles a day during the streak and I have set myself a personal minimum of 2 miles a day. My lifetime mileage is at 89,186 at the time of this writing.

My goal is to keep running as long as I can and to work my way up the US Running Streak Association list (I am currently 95th), to go over 100,000 miles for my career and to complete a 100 mile ultra.

STEVEN COX UPDATES ON WHY STREAK ENDED IN 2016

With each passing issue, I am more and more humbled by the amazing accomplishments of my fellow runners, especially after concluding my first running streak on February 04th, 2016...day #1,130.

I woke up that Thursday to complete my daily run and later that morning underwent a couple of rounds of Mohs surgery to remove a small basal cell carcinoma from my left cheek...wear sunscreen, kids!

Despite my best attempts to persuade the doctor (and disillusion myself) that I would be okay to run the next evening to keep the streak alive, I finally gave in to logic and reason.

I wrote to The Streak Registry after my first anniversary that I did not plan on saying much to this audience until I had been around long enough to earn that right. I will keep that promise and simply state that I am grateful to have kept the company of this community for a little over three (3) years.

My streak was relatively easy to maintain in comparison to the challenges many of you face that I read about on the pages of TSR.

I am in awe of your accomplishments because I understand a very tiny bit about the unwavering dedication each of you have to keep your streaks active.

As a lifelong member of USRSA/SRI, I look forward to rejoining your ranks in the future!

GARY SCOTT'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 4,282 DAYS

Due to a knee injury, my running streak that I began on January 19, 2006 has ended on October 9, 2017. One unique thing about my streak was that I live in Kansas and I ran the mile or more outside in the heat, cold, snow, ice, etc. I may try to improve but at 67 years of age not sure.

My college roommate (John Ulmer) suggested that I run in 2004 to relieve stress as my wife battled Breast Cancer. I thought he was nuts but I tried. It was GREAT. Then he told me about the Streak and I thought that I could do it for one year and it just grew. I was lucky as just had flu or plantar facitis to overcome.

This knee has been nagging since September 1 and I do not want to lose ability to run at all. Thus a painful decision in many ways has me deciding to end the streak. Maybe I can begin another one and do longer. So, 11.72 years or 4,282 days and I will end this current streak.

I was a runner in high school, where I was a member of The Ringgold High School team. But after graduation, I fell away from it and gained a lot of weight. That last photo is me in 1999. I was very overweight and knew something had to change. I started working out and slowly got back into running while I am doing good from time to time over the years, I still kept gaining the weight back.

Eventually, Running got me back to a healthy lifestyle. It started right after I started a new job. A coworker was talking about starting a run streaking with his girlfriend. He explained that it was one-mile-a-day minimum. And I asked if I could join in the fun.

I had no idea what run streaking was or that there was even a group out there like this. So on a whim I started run streaking on Jan. 1, 2012.

It was a challenge at first. Some nights I just wanted to lay on the couch, but I got up and kept it going - only because I really didn't want to loose to my coworker.

After a few months it really started to feel normal and I was excited to run after work. Now my day is not complete until I run! I am so happy I started running every day.

I have even had the honor of running with Richard Wright, a long time run streaker of 26+ years. In high school, I could never break the 6-minute-mile, but thanks to run streaking I was able to run a 5:54 mile, 20 years after high school, at the Liberty Mile in Pittsburgh.

I have run two full marathons, and a bunch of half marathons. I really enjoy and prefer half marathons. Full marathons are just not for me. I have been getting stronger and faster every year thanks to run streaking. I am not the fastest, but just really enjoy running. It has changed me for the better.

ROGER CROSSLEY'S STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

My streak remains active & hopefully it will continue for quite some time. My daily average throughout the course of the streak remains at a little over 6.2 miles & I still haven't run under 3 miles on any given day.

I battled a severe arthritis flair-up in my left hip that reduced my mileage to four miles per day for nearly three months earlier this year, but things are back to normal for now & I hope to finish up the year logging over 2,000 miles for the seventh year in a row (set a personal best for mileage in August). The arthritis has shortened my stride considerably & on a good day I now run between 9:00 & 10:00 miles (on a bad day it's more like between 10:00 & 11:00).

I've given up racing for the time being, but may start doing 5Ks again when I hit 65. I still hope to run a half-marathon some day as well (never participated in a race longer than a 10K). I continue to take things one day at a time & am in awe of those whose streaks have gone on for a decade or more.

My running streak, which started on June 23, 1993, ended with my final 1 mile run on Sept. 12, 2017. I ran 24 years and almost 4 months, 8,447 days.

BILL HOWES' STREAK HITS 6 YEARS

Yes, my streak is still going! I was very ill in May and almost cashed it in but my dear wife Beth talked me out of bed for 2 days to get the one mile in. I'm very glad she did!

My thoughts go out to all our fellow streakers in Texas and Florida affected by the recent hurricanes. I hope all are safe and that they were able to maintain their streaks particularly Raven Kraft and his incredible daily 8 miler!

The picture is from last week's Frank Lloyd Wright 10k in Oak Park, Illinois with my son Derek and daughter Lauren.

BILL SHIRES' STREAK HITS 31 YEARS

And, yes, my running streak continues – 31 years and still counting.

I am another year older and feeling the miles a bit more than I use to – even from a few years ago. To compensate, I have found myself venturing more often than not on to the trails. They seem to save my legs from the constant pounding that I receive while running on asphalt.

Has it helped, I'd say – yes, it has. Just a few weeks ago, I finished 2nd in the US National Whitewater Center 50k trail race in 5 hours and 19 minutes. I finished a scant 10 minutes behind a true trail runner – Karl Metzler.

A week later, I was back on the roads, running the Big South 5k here in Charlotte, NC in 17:47.

Crossing my fingers that life and running continues along the same lines, and you will be hearing from me again when the counter trips at 32 years.

JEREMY MATTESON'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 644 DAYS

I regret to tell you that after 644 days, my streak came to an end. I developed hip pain that evolved into a stress fracture, and was working its way into my femoral neck. Ortho said that further damage would require placement of a pin and 3 months non-weight bearing. So I decided to stop. I will say, that streak was the best running phase in my life. The USRSA is a wonderful thing! Thank you for what you do.

Ken Johnson “during the Love.Run.Marathon at Huntsville State Park in February 2014 of me during my 101st marathon.”

KEN JOHNSON’S STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

After previous streaks of 600 days, 1,811 days and 2,483 days, Ken Johnson’s current streak hit 8 years on October 18, 2017. He has since celebrated his 50th wedding anniversary by running the Huntsville (Texas) Half Marathon on October 28. His wife, Marilynn, walked the 5K.

Besides keeping his streak going, his next goal is to complete his 1,000th race at the Santa Hustle Half Marathon in Galveston on December 17. Then, he plans on running his 101st half marathon (including a few 25K’s) at the Love.Run.Half Marathon at Huntsville State Park on February 17 in honor of those who have served with the 101st Airborne Division. Ken served with this division in Vietnam in 1967 and 1968. He ran his 101st full marathon (or ultra) at this same race in 2014 at age 72.

DANIELLE MEYERS’ STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I’m still trucking along. Nothing much has changed other than I got a new puppy recently, and he’s started running with me at 4 months old, which translates to much slower runs because he still can’t figure out quite what we’re doing. It’s hilarious. I’m still climbing towers and still working way too much. I still can’t quite believe it’s been 2 years!

BETSEY GOERING’S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I also have a minimum 3-mile sub streak going on in 2017. I’m racing a half at Disney World this Sunday [5 November 2017], the Dallas Marathon in December, and then Antelope Canyon 55K in February. This will be the first year since 2008 that I will break 2,000 miles for the year. I feel incredibly fortunate that my health allows me to run every day! Deciding to streak was one of the best decisions I’ve made.

RICK DECKER'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 975 DAYS

I just wanted to let you know that my streak has come to an end. My last day of running was October 31st. Back issues kept me from running on the 1st. I was hoping to get my comma but came up just short. My totals for the streak are 975 days and 2,239 miles. I will take a break and maybe start it up again.

BEN KIMBALL'S STREAK ENDED IN 2015 AFTER 756 DAYS

KRISTEN KENNER- OHLMANN'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

Yes, my running streak is intact and rolling into year 5. I am sending this email from Indianapolis, where I will run my lifetime 30th marathon on Saturday [4 November 2017]. With a streak started in late fall, I've always been very careful about sticking to the treadmill, dry pavement or US Bank stadium for my runs. My goals for next year, beyond keeping my streak going, are to remain healthy, add 2 states to my list of marathon completions (AZ and CA) and attempt a Boston Qualifying time at California International Marathon.

BARRY SACKETT'S STREAK HITS 8 YEARS

My 8th year has been an exploration into Ultra. Last year I ran a couple of 50 mile races, this year I will be running my second 100 miler in December. Streaking has been a great preparation for this journey. The knowledge that I will not die from another step, in taking that next step I make the following one possible and I will feel much better tomorrow if I finish this mile have all been proven to me every day for 8 years. How could I adequately value the blessing of the streak's daily reset of life?

Each morning I go out and say my prayers, feel my soul, find a body that functions, push the fog from my brain and lead from my legs. I do not talk about the streak with others much anymore, it is part of my fabric and those that get familiar with my fabric realize it is there, but as a base layer which makes so much possible in my life.

Each day I am home my running buddies are our dogs, Emmy Lou and Izy and most recently Toast. Emmy is 15 years old and still prances along. Izy has three legs, so her gait is not as fluid, but highly functional and powerful and Toast is just getting started in her little life and rides on me until the last mile. I mention this part of my streak, because I know I would not have a streak without their daily insistence that I wake to feed them, love them and run them. Their unwavering spirit is the same spirit I find in my streak and in all of you streakers who inspire me with your stories. Looking forward to year number nine and my annual report, so until then I hope to see you all out on a run.

Kyle Sather

KYLE SATHER JOINS USRSA

Hey everybody! I'm Kyle Sather, one of the newest members of the USRSA. I'm currently 25 years old with most of my daily runs occurring in Duluth, Minnesota. I'm in graduate school pursuing my Master of Social Work, and my streak began when I was in undergrad.

The run streak started mostly out of curiosity, wondering how long I could possibly maintain such a routine. I have a friend who once reached a run streak of over 800 days who joked "I could run an hour each day, and still have 23 hours to recover." Socializing with that kind of mentality rubbed off on me and helped me push through the days, which required the most mental strength. The run streak has become something I can count on every single day; an activity to start my day with or the perfect nightcap to settle me down after a stressful series of events.

During my streak I have competed in beer miles, half marathons, road marathons and a trail 50k. Once I am finished with school in May I hope to make my run streak manageable routine and find a time of day, which works best for me. Those who wish to follow my journey or hold me accountable can follow me on strava at:

NICK CAPERNA'S STREAK HITS A DECADE

Yes, all goes well. Still running strong. 10 years seems like such a long period of time. And yes, although there have been many changes in my life, the daily run still remains a steadfast constant.

Of course, it pales in comparison to some of the truly great accomplishments of members of this group. But, I'm proud to count myself among the devoted and continue to keep my eyes forward. Regardless of life's hurdles I am eagerly looking forward to another 10 yrs.

I'd like to include a picture of probably my favorite run of this past year... The day after my wedding, May 21st.

You'll notice I didn't run solo that morning... in fact, the shorts were a little wedding gift from my wife. Across the tush they read "Just Married."

LINDSEY MARTIN'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

I am still running every day, yes! Here's my story:

I started running on my 30th birthday. The habit stuck quickly. I had always been athletic, just not a runner until then. Throughout my 30s I logged thousands of miles; at my peak I was running 60-70 miles per week at a 2:40:00 marathon pace. In my late 30s, running sort of faded away for me. I just stopped.

One night, when I was 57, I woke up with a tingling sensation on one side of my body and I knew what it probably was. My mother died of a massive stroke in her early 50s, so I knew what the signs were. I tried to walk it off, but when I fell down the stairs I told my wife to call 911. I am fortunate to have received treatment early, and my stroke was minor, so my body and brain returned to 100% quickly. Even though I still felt like I was in great shape, I had had a stroke. I needed to do something.

So I decided to start running again. I started on November 1, 2012, at 58 years old, and I'm still running at least a few miles every day, 4 years later. I'm slower than I used to be and I log fewer miles, but I feel great and I love knowing every night that I ran today.

PHILLIP HAWLEY'S STREAK HITS 18 YEARS

18 years down. I have become only the 201st individual in history to document running every day for 18 years. I add the in history part to make it sound more dramatic. I am just getting over a muscle tear which is always a little scary but no other real concerns. I have increased my millage which has lead to a decrease in speed in the last few months. My current goal pace is 6 minutes plus my age in seconds so right now that is 6:32 pace. I had 4 races I focused on this year and 3 of them worked out great with around the same results I have enjoyed since college but the first one this spring was a disaster that had me questioning my ability to live up to my expectations.

I am so glad to be part of this community and am always amazed at the lengths people will push themselves to save their streaks. Thank you to all the individuals that keep this organization running!

KELLY NELSON'S STREAK HITS 2 YEARS

I made it another year and am excited for year three! I did increase my miles about 50% this year and ran a half, but nothing too exciting. In this stage of life with young kids I'm fortunate to find 20 minutes for a quick run some days. I'm glad I'm streaking- if I wasn't I can see it would be easy to not run for days at a time. Thanks for sending out the quarterly updates- it keeps me motivated!!

DAVID TODD'S STREAK ENDS AFTER 14,270 DAYS

I would like to report that the last day of my running streak was November 7, 2017. It wasn't the way I thought it would end, but it's over, none the less. Life finally got in the way. I'm a creature of habit and as such, the first thing I do when I wake up at 5:30 AM every day is walk into my closet and put on my running clothes. This morning it hit me when I walked into that closet – I didn't run yesterday. Yesterday was not a normal day for me. I had spent the night with my 97 year old father as my mother (93) was in the hospital recovering from a heart attack. Rather than run, I left there and went straight to work. No big deal, I thought, as I would just run when I got home after work. Well, unfortunately the thought never crossed my mind again until I walked into that closet this morning.

I am proud of the 39 years that I ran without missing, and will continue to run. Congratulations to everyone ahead of me on the list, and to all those behind me, you can now move up one spot.

TRACEY MCKIBBEN'S STREAK HITS 4 YEARS

I am still keeping the streak going, more out of stubbornness than anything. Thyroid issues and plantar fasciitis have really curtailed my running and most of my daily runs are slow 1-milers. Hopefully I can get things turned around soon and start doing something that will be worth writing an update about. In the meantime, I'm too stubborn to let the streak go just because running isn't that much fun anymore. I still remember the days when it was and am hoping that I can get back to that place sometime soon.

ROXANNE LORENZ'S STREAK HITS 3 YEARS

I am still running every day. Year 2 was an exciting year with the birth of my youngest 3 days after my 2 year anniversary. Thankfully I was able to keep running! I also broke my arm (which required surgery) while rollerblading this past year. Thankfully I was able to keep running with my broken arm! Honestly, running with a broken arm was more difficult than running right after giving birth.

This past summer has been full of running races and triathlons. I just did my last race of the season (a 10 miler) this past weekend. It was a good race even though I took a wrong turn and ended up running an extra .75 mile. Oh well! Overall, it was a really good summer and looking forward to year 3!

Susan Rattenbury

SUSAN RATTENBURY'S NEW STREAK HITS A YEAR

So, now I'm a multi-streak runner. My first streak of just over two years ended when I had a hysterectomy. I ran early the morning of the surgery thinking maybe I could pull off a run the following day before midnight (nope). However, I was curious to see what life was like without running every day.

For the next three months I went back to my old habits of sporadic workouts hampered by "rest" days that would ruin any momentum. And in a pretty similar fashion to the first streak, on a random day in July I just ran the next consecutive day and a new streak was born.

As it turned out, taking a break really strengthened my resolve to run every day. Many thanks again to all who keep the US Running Streak Association going. I'm so grateful you exist!

Michael Hammond

MICHAEL HAMMOND JOINS USRSA

I started running in Seventh grade in 1973. My love for running continued throughout my life. Although I didn't run as much as I'd like while my children were growing, I never lost my love for running. Running is my peace, my solitude, my church, my time to be with friends, or time to be alone.

I was diagnosed with cancer in 2006. After chemo and radiation, I used running to get back the life that was nearly taken from me. I was very overweight from the drugs and steroids, but alive, and I could run. The extra weight made my joints ache. But with some regular running I lost all of the gained weight and some additional weight to get back to a good running/racing weight. Then it was off the the local race series to compare to the "big boys" of running locally. I faired very well that first year.

Then I started the steak. I wanted to do the Thanksgiving to New Year's streak. It was successful and I decided to continue. I was concussed officiating a football game in October of 2014—streak ended. It didn't last a year. So let's restart. New streak attempt started on November 1, 2014. Pretty ambitious, I thought, for a 53-year-old, cancer survivor.

I just passed 3 years. The streak will someday end itself, but in the meantime, I will enjoy my "church of the run."

SHAWN MASTRANTONIO'S STREAK ENDED IN 2015 AFTER 557 DAYS

Running streak is still going! Nothing to update from my end. Was only able to get one marathon in this last year because of time. Worst mile of my streak was this year on upper red lake running on the ice during an ice fishing trip, wind, cold and ice just made for a tough run.

Looking forward to the next year.

Bram Arrington

BRAM ARRINGTON JOINS USRSA

I began triathlons six years ago and only had a couple hundred lifetime running miles prior to that. After completing the Ironman distance, I got burned out on training so my running declined. A few years ago I started a Thanksgiving to New Year's streak that lasted until February. Illness prevented me from continuing, but it was still something that I was proud of. After another year in and out of relative fitness, I started a streak in October 2016 to get back into shape for an annual Turkey Trot. I simply planned on continuing until illness struck. So far, that hasn't happened.

I enjoy my streak and I enjoy running but I presently see them as two different things, so neither is a chore. On days where I don't particularly feel like running, I end up only going a mile. Then there are other times when I'm itching to get outside and go, and a mile just won't cut it.

All of my runs have been outside and I maintain that as a goal. Most are road runs but I make as many as possible on the beautiful trails of nearby Patapsco State Park. Several of my runs were with either my 10 year old son Jack or my 8 year old daughter Annabel. My 5 year old, Charlie, frequently asks to come as well but a mile would be a stretch for his little legs. Maybe next year.

I feel it's important for my children to see me healthy and happy, doing something that I enjoy. I believe that they understand the magnitude of the streak while seeing that each individual run is something that they could do themselves right now. Hopefully that's a lesson that they can use throughout their lives.

I wanted to let you know that I ended my streak of 1742 days on September 4. After spending 5 hours playing golf on a beautiful day, I got home and decided not to run my daily streak mile. Running will always be a big part of my life, but my fitness program has become a more diverse program including weights, yoga, golf, etc. In particular, on the days I golf, I really don't need to do a run on a day where I am already involved in a physical exercise for hours.

This last year has been an exciting one! For a numbers guy, some pretty cool things happened as I was one of 63 streakers who was able to celebrate streak day 2017 in 2017. I also had Y2K and 2121, which were equally as cool. I added a few more states to the ones I have run now totaling 22 states and 6 countries during this current streak. I added streaks within my streak of doing push-ups and sit ups every day with adding one additional each day and I am past day 200 with those.

The best thing though is my wife Jennifer will be at day 252 on 11/24/17 that is pretty awesome as she goes for second time running everyday for a year. Cheers to running, fun with numbers, and to #7

If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And---which is more---you'll be a Man, my son!

THE FINISH LINE

By: Mark Washburne

The big news out of this last quarter concerns our running streak website at runeveryday.com. As I mentioned in the Fall 2017 issue of "The Finish Line," I signed a contract with a company to redesign and automate our website. A couple of weeks ago, I met with the web designer, Loren Long, and she showed me a mockup of her work. Under the new design, individuals will soon be able to fill out their own streak information with only a final one-step approval process by us before it appears on our streak and membership lists. This should speed up the process from when someone submits a streak and seeing it appear on our website. We hope to be operational with the new website sometime in December or early next year.

On another note, I believe that service to one's government in a representative role is an honorary pursuit that should be admired and respected. I know, however, not all of you feel the same way and some do not wish to hear anything that is remotely political in this running streak newsletter. If you are in the "no politics group," please stop reading now but for the others I wanted to update you on a decision I recently made to serve my country (United States of America) in a representative role.

When 2017 began, I knew that running would be part of my life in the New Year. After all, I am the President of the United States Running Streak Association (2011-present), Founder of Streak Runners International (2012-present), and the main organizer and Founder of a local running group in Morris County, New Jersey called the Do Run Runners (2010-present).

As the New Year began, I also had some running goals I wanted to achieve in 2017. These goals included running my 13th consecutive Boston Marathon (completed April 17th), run my 10,000 consecutive days in a row (reached on May 17th), complete my 800th race (accomplished on July 4th at Cranford Firecracker 4 Miler where I also won my age group), and run the Chicago Marathon (completed on October 8 and qualified for the Boston Marathon).

While not in my plans at the start of 2017, I was lucky to join another running club, the North Jersey Masters (NJM), in May to be part of their race squad that competes in the USA Track & Field-New Jersey (USATF-NJ) team competition in distances that range from one mile to a half marathon. I am also pleased to be on the NJM men's 60s team that finished second in the state-wide New Jersey competition for our age division.

Yes, I knew running would be a part of my life but I did not know that would include running for public office. As a College History and Political Science Professor for the last 25 years, however, I believe my country is facing a crisis seldom matched in any period during our country's 241 years due to the actions of our President. I, therefore, announced on November 8, 2017 - the one-year anniversary of the election of our 45th President - that I am a candidate to represent New Jersey's 11th District in the United States House of Representative. Please click here and see "Why I am Running" near the bottom of my campaign webpage for more details: www.washburneforcongress.com.

Good luck to all of you as we each run the roads and trails – every day!

"The race is not always to the swift, but to those who keep on running."
